Dear Mr. Carr:

Thank you for your letter of August 28, 1967.
I regret that we cannot meet your request for information concerning training.

Because of the nature of its duties, required by law and by considerations of national security, the Central Intelligence Agency does not discuss its organization, personnel or operational methods.

I hope, however, that the attached brochure may give you some idea of how we go about recruiting personnel.

Your interest in this Agency is appreciated.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir:

I'm presently in need of some procedural type of information regarding recruitment methods, and basic training, which a CIA recruit is exposed to in your organization.

Understandably, many of your operations are clasified; but I'm only interested in the initial steps one must take to aquire a job with CIA. And if possible, the initial interviews leading to the basic training of a CIA operative.

Any appropriate information you can send me will be helpful in incorporating CIA intelligently into my present film script.

Very sincerely,

Tom Carr
